

Morris-Jenkins' 'Bobby' makes a stop at Samaritan House

Actor J.R. Adduci, who plays "Bobby" from the Morris-Jenkins commercials, spent Tuesday morning eating breakfast with staff and clients at Samaritan House – where homeless people recover after being released from the hospital after surgery. Morris-Jenkins owner Dewey Jenkins has supported Samaritan House for over a decade through Rotary Club nonprofit projects. Brad Goforth, executive director of Samaritan House, is a fan of "Bobby" and was excited about his visit.
